

Blast Theory: A Machine To See With

By Jessica Armbruster Wednesday, Apr 13 2011

Comments A A A

Ever wanted to star in your own film noir? At this creative event you will be able to do so. Armed with a cell phone, you will be asked to arrive at a pre-assigned street corner near St. Anthony Main. The story then begins with a call. You'll have to watch out for danger, as each message leads you to new adventures through a high-drama heist tale. And do you feel like you're being watched? You probably are. U.K.-based group Blast Theory debuted A Machine to See With, dubbed "locative cinema," at the Sundance Film Festival this year. So, what happens when the audience becomes the camera and the star of the picture? This is one cinematic experience where you won't be vegging out with a bucket of popcorn. Call 612.375.7600 for reservations.

Mondays, Tuesdays, Fridays, 4-7 p.m.;
Saturdays, Sundays, 1-4 p.m. Starts: April 15.
Continues through April 19, 2011

