Royal Albert Memorial Museum reopening, Exeter

The reopening of Exeter's Royal Albert Memorial Museum's is a bright spot in a regional arts scene turned gloomy by funding cuts. The building has a new extension, revamped collections of local artefacts, 19th-century art and new commissions. Exhibitions include work by Queen Victoria's favourite photographers, (to 1 Apr), and French and British painting from impressionism to the 1920s (to 11 Mar). Maria Lalic's paintings, integrated into the building, literally delve into the local landscape with pigments made from rock samples. And Blast Theory have created Ghostwriter, a spectral chaperon who will talk you through the collection.
